ABSTRACT

[0046]   Computer application performance is enhanced by parallelizing the processing of the received application launch argument list. One or more input argument files are identified in the argument list. Two or more parallel threads are created when there are 5   two or more input argument files in the argument list. The input argument files are then processed using the parallel threads, and the results are synchronized if necessary.